Study Says Soot Virus May Cause Human Leukemia

DETROIT—Is dreaded human leukemia caused by cancer viruses? Medical scientists at Duke University believe they have found the virus that has touched off leukemia in animals. The virus was found in soot. Scientists say this discovery does not prove that cancer viruses cause human leukemia, but it does open the way for such proof. Dr. Thomas Dunn, who directed the research, described it as a significant difference.

Dr. Dunn and his colleagues have been working with soot for three years. They have found that three separate and distinct forms of leukemia can be produced in animals. They have described the viruses that cause the cells and chemical changes.

At present it is still necessary to prove conclusively that leukemia can be caused by cancer viruses, but it is true, the problem of leukemia has been solved, and the control methods will stand. Dr. Dunn approach to the study of leukemia seems." he said.

This tiny clump of nine nerve cells, which controls the lobster's heartbeat, is being studied by the zoology department at the University of California.

By using microscopic electrodes in the nerve cells the investigators have been able to record the electrical activity generated by them. This energy comes from two groups of nerve cells—four small ones and five large ones.

The small cells apparently stimulate the large ones, which in turn cause the quick, rhythmic heart contractions. The nervous energy is fired in machine-gun-like blasts. The study has suggested that the lobster heart is a model organism which is capable of very simple behavior patterns—rhythmic, coordinated contractions. The "miniature brain" with its relative autonomy and spontaneous, integrated and patterned activity shows strong resemblance to a central nervous system.

Marriage Superstitions Surround Old Shoes

LOS ANGELES—The throwing of old shoes at newlyweds embodies ancient beliefs in the shoe as a symbol of fertility, says folklore scholar Dr. Wayland Hand.

Articles of clothing have always played a prominent role in superstitions involving relationships between man and wife. For example, says Dr. Hand, the folk notion is still current in some isolated parts of North Carolina that if a girl puts on a boy's hat, it's a sign she wants to kiss him. An old Armenian belief holds that placing the husband's shoes under the bed will insure the fertility of the wife. The U.C.L.A. professor says that most American folklore beliefs originated in Europe, although some have taken peculiarly American twists from time to time.

Boy Digs to Pay For Dog's Burial

NEWARK—Stories about a boy and his dog are legend and numerous. Thirteen year old Tommy Gorse and his dog Wow Wow reflect the type of devotion that has stirred many a reader.

Tommy and his dog were on the same dirt road. They grew up together. Tommy named the dog at the age of 4 when he babbled the words "Wow Wow." They were the closest of pals. Wow Wow followed Tommy to school each day, then turned home reluctantly.

Recently Wow Wow died. Tommy refused the suggestions of parents and friends that the dog be buried in the back yard or the country, and spent $150 of his savings for college and medical school to bury the dog in a Chester, N.Y. animal cemetery, beneath an inscription which reads in part . . . "my devoted pal . . . "

Members of the Robert E. Lee F. F. A. Chapter of Appomattox High School are observing National F. F. A. Week, February 16 to 23. Highlight of their observation will be the annual Father - Son Banquet on Friday night, with Lennie Gamage, past national vice-president of the Future Farmers as guest speaker.

Otherwise the local Chapter is observing the week by placing posters in the school building, by a display in The Bank of Appomattox, and by pictures and articles in this newspaper.

The Robert E. Lee Chapter of the Future Farmers of America has 70 members. Officers of this Chapter are: president, Frank Inge; vice-president, Fred Caldwell; secretary, Ralph Inge; treasurer, Floyd Jamerson; sentinel, Kinchle Martin; and reporter, James Carter.

The national Future Farmer organization has more than 383,000 members in the 48 States, Hawaii and Puerto Rico. Membership in Virginia totals 8,106. Membership in the F. F. A. is made up of farm boys who are students of vocational agriculture in high school. The organization's activities are designed primarily to help develop rural leadership and good citizenship, and to stimulate the boys to better achievement in their study and work toward successful establishment in farming.

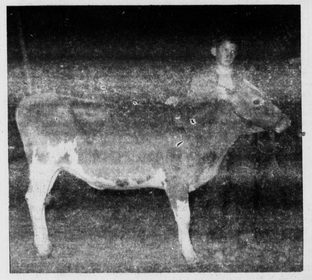
National F. F. A. Week is observed during the week of the anniversary of the birthday of George Washington. Though a war hero and a president, Washington's first love was the farm. He was one of the first farmers in the nation to practice contour planting, crop rotation, and other soil conserving methods. He experimented with many new plants and ideas. He helped to develop the mule in America, and introduced alfalfa to Virginia. It is out of deep respect and admiration for George Washington, the farmer in whose progresive ways they seek to follow, that Future Farmers annually observe their National F. F. A. Week at the time of his birthday.

National Future Farmers of America Week seeks to focus attention on the work of the Future Farmers of today, who will be the successful farmers of tomorrow. This nation must have about 130,000 new farmers every year to replace those who die, retire or otherwise leave the farm. These men must be men with experince and training enough to become successful farmers. Vocational agriculture and the F. F. A. constitute the most effective program yet developed for training boys to be good farmers and helping them to become established in the farming occupations of their choice.

THE F. F. A. MOTTO

Learning to do,
Doing to learn;
Earning to live,
Living to serve.

4. H. S. FUTURE FARMERS WIN PRIZES



Brod Pack, freshman member of Appomattox High School F. F. A. is shown with his purebred registered Guernsey heifer. This animal was a blue ribbon winner at Farmville Five County Fair last fall.

In vocational agriculture courses in our high school each student is required to conduct a "Supervised farming program" where he puts into actual practice the farming knowledge gained in the classroom. The teacher makes frequent visits to the boy's home farm, supervising and helping with the development of his program. Boys usually start as freshmen with small projects, such as a few chickens, a pig, a calf, and an acre or two of crops. As they advance in their work, they are encouraged to expand their farming programs so that by the time they have completed high school they will have built up an investment in farming large enough to permit them to farm on a full-time basis, or, as is frequently the case, to permit them to enter upon a sound partnership agreement with their parents.

* * * * * * * *

The Future Farmers of America is the national organization, of, by, and for farm boys studying vocational agriculture in public secondary schools which operate under the provisions of the National Vocational Education Acts. It is an educational, non-profit, non-political farm youth organization of voluntary membership, designed to develop agricultural leadership, character, thrift, scholarship, cooperation, citizenship, and patriotism. Boys must be enrolled in vocational agriculture to become eligible for membership. They may retain their membership for three years following their graduation from high school or until they are 21 years of age.
